One of their main objectives will be to determine if adjustments in collection, processing, and production are necessary and feasible within existing resources, or whether supplemental funding action is required.

3. Additionally, during this period we continued the process of transferring substantive responsibilities on the Soviet cruise missile problem to the new CIPC staff. The formerly constituted CIPC is presently preparing an interim report documenting the results of their efforts. This report is scheduled to be completed by 15 March 1983. We obviously will use the results of the report as the basis for structuring any follow-up action the new CIPC might usefully undertake.
